Reports of "Second Crop" Oats Brings Call for Picture Contest To Advertiser-Sentinel Readers

Publishers Offer Three Prizes for Camera Pictures That Will Preserve the Phenomena of New Grain Growing From Old Plants — Three Valuable Prizes Offered for Photos and Exhibits of Grain.

Unusual events which come to a community call for unusual treatment by the newspapers serving the people of that community. Farmers of southern Steuben County are reporting many instances of "second crop" oats, and in order to preserve the full story of this strange occurrence the publishers of the ADDISON ADVERTISER and WOODHULL SENTINEL are offering valuable prizes to readers who help make the record of this phenomena more complete.

Many farmers in the vicinity of Addison have been greatly surprised this fall to find a second crop of oats springing up in their fields, and the second crop is reported in most instances to be better than the first crop. This freak of nature is all the more remarkable because the second crop springs from the old plant, instead of coming up from seed.

One explanation given for the phenomena attributes the second crop of oats to the dry weather, which stunted the growth in many fields. When the drouth was broken the grain stalks were in some cases too near maturity to add further growth, but evidently the roots and the plants below the stalk still held the spark of life. As moisture came these plants apparently became re-invigorated and sent up new shoots which have developed into strong stands of grain. Many fields that were considered such a failure the owners did not try to harvest them, have put on this new growth of oats which give promise of yielding a fair crop yet this fall.

Old experienced farmers in this locality say they have never before seen a second crop of oats spring up in this way. Frequently the seed will self-sow, when the over-ripe heads shell out in harvesting, and other instances have been known when part of the seed grain has lain dormant, because of dry weather, until later in the season. But for a field of oats to spring up from the roots of older plants is an entirely new oddity of nature, according to local farmers.

The evidence of this unusual occurrence should be preserved for scientific and historical reasons. In order to encourage readers of the ADDISON ADVERTISER and WOODHULL SENTINEL to assist these publications in gathering more data concerning this phenomena of second crop oats in Steuben County Southern Tier News will offer three prizes.

The prizes will be awarded to readers who bring to the ADVERTISER office the best camera picture showing second crop oats growing from older plants. There will be three prizes awarded as follows: One prize of $5 cash for the best exhibit. One prize of a two years' subscription to the ADDISON ADVERTISER or WOODHULL SENTINEL for the second best exhibit. One prize of one year's subscription to the ADDISON ADVERTISER or WOODHULL SENTINEL for the third best exhibit.

Accompaning each picture, there must be a clump of the second crop oats growing from the old plant, pulled from the field where the photograph is taken. Pictures should be taken close enough to the growing grain to show their purpose; that is to show second crop oats coming from the old plants. Prize-winning pictures should be distinct enough, and show sufficient detail to reproduce as newspaper cuts. The contest will close Saturday, October 24. Competent judges will be announced in the next week's issue of this paper.

The time is short, so everyone interested in camera picture-taking should hurry to get their negatives for this contest.

Canvas Camp Completed For Company Here From Coast

Lieutenant Johnson With Men From 297th Company Put Up Tents for Men Arriving From Seattle—Company 231 Will Start Work on Permanent Camp for Builders of Addison Dam.

Work on tne temporary CCC camp has progressed rapidly the past few days, and accommodations were complete yesterday for its occupation by a company of 100 men. The camp is located on the William Dininny farm three and one-half miles west of Addison, being the first step in the big undertaking of constructing a three million dollar earth dam across Tuscarora Creek.

Work on the camp started last Thursday under command of Lieutenant Willard H. Johnson of the 297th Company. Lieutenant Johnson brought 28 men from his permanent Soil Conservation Camp encampment at Kanona, and this force was increased Tuesday by 20 more men secured from the camp at Cohocton. The temporary camp will be occupied by a company of 99 CCC men arriving in Addison yesterday afternoon from Seattle, Wash. This is Company 231 which has been brought back to its own corps area from the west coast. The 231st will live in temporary camp while constructing permanent buildings for the larger force which will be employed for more than three years in building the Addison dam.

The temporary camp is built of canvas, being located on the flat land a short distance west of the Dinniny farm buildings. There are 32 sleeping tents, 1 officers tent, 1 supply tent and 1 camp store tent situated on two company streets. East of these sleeping quarters are service buildings, also of canvas. There are 4 large tents placed together forming two dining rooms, and nearby is the kitchen supply tent already stocked with provisions enough to last tthe company 7 days. Behind the supply tent is the kitchen tent proper where meals for the company will be prepared in two ovens large enough to cook food for 150 men. An ice pit has been dug near the kitchen.

On lower ground beyond the camp streets a leaching pit has been dug for disposal of waste water, while sanitary arrangements have been installed in the same lower area. Work of drilling a water well for the camp has started under the supervision of Engineer Reilly who has charge of the surface exploration work at the dam. The well drilling was proceeding slowly, the spudding in process being delayed by the striking of large boulders of hard rock.

Bert Taft House Destroyed by Fire

Fire completely destroyed the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Taft Monday morning. The fire was first discovered Sunday while Mrs. Taft was preparing dinner for guests. It was supposed to have been extinguished but again broke out the next morning while Mr. and Mrs. Taft were absent from the house. An alarm was spread and many responded but the fire was beyond control when help arrived.

The milk house was also burned but the barn was saved.

The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Old Tymers Hold Happy Reunion

An impromptu dinner party and reunion was enjoyed by a small party of past and present Addison people last week. One member of the party has sent the Advertiser a short story of the affair, which the editor is glad to print as received, even on risk of stirring the fires of jealousy among many who do not rate that "three score and ten" mark and were hence not included.

"On Saturday evening last Dr. and Mrs. Barron were hosts to a rather unusual company called together on short notice to partake of a dinner served by Madame Pepper and assistant. It's not often a company of a doz or so people find themselves all near the three score years and ten mark, and in for so jolly a time. The honor guests were Horace Jennings of Silver Creek, N. Y. and Carl C. Miller and wife of Howard, Colo. All of the party more or less were Addisonians except Mrs. Miller for Carl wandered far from home to find his life mate. Also all of the party —eleven in number to be exact— have been students of old A. H. S. except three, and there was much reminescing and telling of old jokes and pranks along with the delightful dinner served at so short a notice. Dinner over our host led to the movie house for an hour of entertainment.

"Here's a toast to our host, and
Mrs. Julia his wife,
May the years bring them fresh memories of old friends from far and near."

"Sudden Death" Takes Westfield Man Near Addison Last Night

Harold J. Van Dusen Killed When His Car Smashes Into Truck at South Addison—Driver of Truck and Companion Escape Injury—Police Report the Death Car Traveling at High Rate of Speed.

"Sudden Death" stalked the highway near Addison again last evening for the second time in about a fortnight as Harold J. Van Dusen, Westfield, Pa. young man lost his life when his car collided with a heavily laden truck at South Addison. The accident happened at 7:00 P. M. about 50 feet from the Vona gasoline stand, when the Van Dusen car struck a truck driven by Manley M. Smith, 25, of 132 Park Ave., Binghamton. Chief of Police Bovee of Addison was at the scene of the accident soon after it happened.

Dr. H. E. Auringer was called from Addison immediately after the collision, but before he reached the injured man he had breathed his last.

According to Chief Bovee, Van Dusen was traveling west at a high rate of speed, and crowded towards the wrong side of the road. Smith was driving his truck slowly up the grade at that point in the highway in second gear, and had his machine well out on the shoulder when the Pontiac car driven by Van Dusen crashed into the heavier vehicle.

Mrs. Kitty Bronson was a close witness to the accident as she was walking along the shoulder at the time. As the truck crowded over off the concrete in an attempt to avoid the onrushing car Mrs. Bronson thought she would be struck and leaped down an embankment to escape. In her fall she injured her left arm.

The truck was owned by Leo Masters, also of Binghamton and was working in the employ of the Highway Freight Company. It was loaded with five tons of tomato juice. Accompanying Smith was Gerald Holland, 25, also of Binghamton. Neither the driver or Holland was injured.

Little could be learned about Van Dusen, save that he was a young man apparently in his twenties. It was reported that he was engaged in the monument business at Westfield, but at the time this paper goes to press no facts concerning the young man's family can be established.

Forms Being Built for Concrete Wall Along the Canisteo River

Work on Dike Proper to Start the First of Next Week —Wall to Start at Main Street Bridge and Go Westward — Last of Piles Being Driven While Carpenters Build Forms.

Carpenters are now busy building forms which will be used for the concrete dike along the Canisteo River, and with the pile driving nearing completion the work should soon be making more visible progress. According to Fred Doddato, who is in charge of the work on the river, actual pouring of concrete will start the first of next week at the Main Street bridge, the wall going westward.

As the big forms for the dike take shape it is possible for the ordinary person to comprehend what a large concrete wall will stand in the way of future floods sweeping down the Canisteo. The forms are made in two sections; a lower base which will stand over the tops of the piles and form a concrete block, when filled, ten feet long, six feet wide and three and one-half feet high. And a top section which will add 14 feet to the height of the wall that narrows up as it goes higher.

Three sets of forms are being made and the first blocks poured will be spaced ten feet apart and filled in later. It is expected that two blocks will be poured each day, the third set of forms being ready for use the first thing each morning so no time will be wasted waiting for the forms used the day before. Concrete for the dike will be extra strong as a rich mixture of two to one will be used. Crushed stone will be drawn from the pile prepared on Orr Hill last winter, and this will be mixed with a good grade of sand.

Less than 100 piles remain to be driven, for the concrete part of the dike. These are being filled in along the lot formerly owned by William Dinniny, where the river bank had to be cut back somewhat for the wall. Repairs on the machine were finished in time to start work again Monday morning.

The holes were repaired in the bottom of the scow by dragging it up the river to a point where the channel had been filled in last winter with dirt from the bank. The water in the pond was lowered so the boat rested on this bar. Then when piles were set up for a tripod, blocks and tackle were used to raise one end of the boat high enough to make the repairs. It was finally determined the scow had been damaged by bumping on an old, submerged pile which loosened some bottom boards and caused a slow leak that gradually grew larger the night the boat sank to the bottom of the river.

Large Crowd Attend Annual Field Day of Addison Club

Fish and Game Men Bring More Than 1,000 People to the Outing at McCarthy Field — Many Prizes Distributed to Winners of Various Events—Visitors Here From Large Number of Surrounding Cities and Villages.

Bright skies and balmy temperature enticed a crowd estimated at over 1,000 to the Addison Fish and Game Club field day and outing Sunday. Sportsmen from Elmira, Geneseo, Hornell, Bath, Hammondsport, Canisteo, Syracuse, Cameron, Cameron Mills, Elkland, Painted Post, Arkport, Waverly, Woodhull and Rathbone swelled the crowd which took part in the many events of the day and watched the various contests. Daniel J. Colbert took the grand prize of a 22-calibre rifle. Gross gate receipts of $425 were reported for the day.

High spots in appeal to the visitors were the fox and coon chases, the coon treeing contest and the trap and skeet shooting. Llewellyn Robbins, club president and Hugh Varn acted as field managers. The skeet and trap shooting were in charge of Raymond Stewart, L. E. Handy, John Davis and Burdette Beers, while George Hargrave and William McCarthy looked after the rifle range.

The skeet shooting contest proved close, four contestants tying with 24 out of 25. In the play-off for the prize E. C. Buckley of Bath won a turkey and Douglas Haven was awarded a fox hound. Attorney Varn won the pistol shooting contest, while H. McConnel and Charles Mace of Canisteo were high scorers with the rifle winning a turkey and a duck, respectively. Addison winners were: Dick Willis a turkey, Hugh Varn a duck, Peter Laffkas a turkey and duck.

The fox chase was won by "Little Dick" a dog owned by Vincent Donovan of Geneseo. The coon chase attracted a field of 15 dogs and the closeness of the chase brought a thrill to the large section of the crowd who watched this event, "Blue Skip" owned by Vincent Donovan winning the prize. Attorney Varn was in charge of these events the judges being William Russ, Jerome Manley, Floyd Myers and Jack Byrne.

Winners in the dog contests with ribbon awards were "Moonshine" and "Judy" English bull dogs owned by Dr. M. F. Whitmore. "Buddy Red Don" an Irish setter owned by J. H. Heffernan of Hammondsport, took first prize in the bird dog contest. "Queenie" owned by Leon Riker of Addison won first prize in the Springer spaniel class, while "Patsy" a Cocker spaniel owned by Thomas Hovey of Erwin won a ribbon in that class. Judges were C. E. Clinton of Cameron, Thomas Hovey of Erwin and Frank Crawford of Addison.

A pony owned by Matthew Whitmore, Jr., took first prize in the pet contest, while a cage of monkeys owned by Billie, Mary Elizabeth and Ellen McCarthy attracted a great deal of attention among the visitors.

The refreshment stand was operated by Eugene Bebout, Mrs. Llewellyn Robbins and Guy Riker. Harry K. Fritts, Jake Kress and Wickham Crocker of Syracuse were gate tenders. Chief of Police Bovee directed the parking arrangements for autos. Much credit for the large crowd is due Mr. Colbert who handled publicity for the event.

WHO SUFFERS?

In one of his characteristically clear editorials, David Lawrence of the United States News, tells how the Roosevelt Administration through its policy of reducing interest rates of savings banks and government bonds has levied a wage cut of more than $300,000,000 a year upon American Labor. He charges further that interest cuts have sent up the cost of life insurance, directly affecting the 63,000,000 policy holders of the country, a large number of whom are the thrifty class of labor.

It is a severe indictment. And when one considers that the Roosevelt Administration forced down interest rates to deceive the public concerning the great carrying cost of the enormous federal debt it has been piling up, the public should realize the New Deal has actually been engaged in a "double deal". In one and the same breath it has claimed credit for aiding the laboring man, and at the same time has issued orders from Washington that definitely reached a pocket-picking hand into the income of labor. While seeking the labor vote because of social legislation—much of which was ill-considered and illegally written—it has damaged labor by cutting interest rates on hard-earned savings and increasing the cost of insurance by the same indirect means.

It is no secret that this administration has purposely reduced interest rates. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and President Roosevelt have both made speeches in which they took pride in accomplishing that result. Yet who has benefited since government dictation forced savings banks interest down from an average of 3.2 per cent to 1.6 per cent. The real beneficiaries have been two classes. First, the politicians of the New Deal, who have been able to build enormous machines of patronage with vast sums included in the huge deficits Roosevelt and Morgenthau have so proudly heaped upon the shoulders of the taxpayers. Second, the large corporations of the country, the "Economic Royalists" if Mr. Roosevelt will insist upon the title, concerns able to call in their bonds written at fair rates of interest and replace them with new securities at far lower rates.

Thus it can easily be understood how Roosevelt, the self-appreciated "friend of the people" has deliberately slashed the incomes and resources of millions of Americans through his policy of cutting down interest rates. He has cut the income of the conservative type of small investor whose life-time savings were invested in government bonds, savings accounts and non-speculative private bonds. He has immeasurably hurt the widows and orphans depending on similar securities received through insurance or savings of a departed husband or father. He has penalized the thrifty laboring man and his family, who took a portion of earnings and deposited them in savings banks and bought life insurance.

In his many "fireside" talks the President has told of his efforts to soak the rich and declared himself to be the "friend of the common man". As Mr. Lawrence well says:

"It is not the rich who are being soaked but the thrifty, the toilers of America, who already have been compelled to give up hundreds of millions of dollars of their wages through the 'cheap money' or low interest policy of the Roosevelt Administration. This policy must be disapproved by the American people in every way that a protest can be made at the polls.

SOCIALISTIC MEDICINE BITTER

Senator Carter Glass, one of the outstanding statesmen of the nation, in a recent speech at the Patrick Henry celebration in Ashland, Virginia, at Randolph-Macon College, made a clear statement that every citizen and taxpayer can understand, when he said of government spending:

"It is not proper to take money of taxpayers of Virginia and appropriate it to pay off mortgages that had been made by thriftless and unwise individuals.

"That is just what we are doing in this country today. The Government's nose is in all sorts of business."

If Patrick Henry were living, said the veteran senator, "he would not cure one evil with a multitude of other evils."

SUDDEN DEATH TO 300

According to preliminary reports, close to 300 people met "sudden death" through accidents over the Labor Day week-end. About 245 of them were victims of recklessly or incompetently driven automobiles.

It would be bad enough if such a shambles only followed a holiday week-end and could be put down to too much merry-making. But every week-end shows totals almost as great. Every day sees lives unnecessarily snuffed out.

Here is something worth remembering: Today, if the average holds, 100 people will be killed by motor cars. A hundred more will be killed tomorrow, and 100 more on the day after that. Friends of yours, your loved ones, yourself, may be among them. And, in addition to the deaths, thousands more will be grievously injured—some made into imbecilies, some destined to spend the rest of their lives in unrelieved pain, some confined to wheel chairs and hospital beds.

Think of that when you step into the car that the salesman proudly told you will "hit her up to 90 so easy you'll think you're only doing 40." It is true that modern cars traveling at extreme speeds ride more easily and comfortably than did the cars of years ago traveling at low speeds. But that illusion of "slow speeding" won't help you in a crash. The result will be just as horrible no matter how luxurious the car, no matter how effortlessly it clicks off its mile-a-minute and better.

A hundred persons killed yesterday—another hundred today — another hundred tomorrow. That is the ghastly record of the dangerous automobile driver.

THE PROGRAM UNFOLDS

Significant is the release of an announcement of a formation of a new labor party to be called the American Labor Party, literature concerning which was mailed out from New York to newspapers of the country last week. It is significant because the entire program outlined for this party takes a form which was predicted by news men some weeks ago.

The American Labor Party announces a two-fold objective—"immediate and long range:

1. The reelection of president Roosevelt and Governor Lehman on November 3rd, and

2. The building of a powerful political party for independent political action by labor and related social groups for the future."

So the cat is now definitely out of the bag. Those who analyze political drifts have maintained there was more back-stage significance to this John L. Lewis support of President Roosevelt than is openly told. The purported plan alleged that John L. Lewis has bigger ambitions than taking Green's place as president of the American Federation of Labor. That what he really is aiming at is the White House. Roosevelt not being a Democrat at heart has no serious scruples about risking the future of the party of which he is the national head. He has already strayed so far towards Socialism with his Tugwellian comrades that thousands of real Democrats have deserted the party. This defection the President hopes to replace with a solid labor vote. Hence the arrangement with Lewis whereby the latter endeavors to swing the election Roosevelt's way in 1936; four more years of radical legislation fathered by the President; a Supreme Court packed with judges during the next four years who are known to favor New Deal Socialism; and finally a triumphant Roosevelt after eight years in the White House swinging the strength of his personal following to John L. Lewis, candidate for President on the American Labor party ticket in 1940.

The American Labor party is far from our conception of what the word "American" stands for. Luigi Antonini, Rose Schneiderman, Jacob Potofsky and Morris Novik, names prominent with that of Mr. Lewis in the organization, are much more suggestive of European Red activities than of anything heretofore connected with the liberties established by our founders.

The deal between John L. Lewis and Mr. Roosevelt — and the miner labor leader is far too astute to cut his bridges without an understanding—contains only one real fallacy. The New Dealers have not reckoned with the temper of the American people, and the American people are now aroused to the dangers of four more years of Roosevelt. They are opposed to heavier and heavier loads of debt which his spendthrift methods would be sure to plunge us into; they are opposed to radicals like Tugwell and Wallace making over the face of the United States; they are opposed to the rotten political spoils system Roosevelt's henchman boss Farley has set up in Washington and throughout the land. They are opposed to broken promises and the idea that Washington bureaucrats can decide what is best for everyone in the country.

A positive tide of revulsion has set in against the innovations this administration has tried to graft upon the American system. Even the President has felt the effect of that changed feeling—as evidenced in the many moves recently made to try to check it. But when the full flood of public opinion in this country starts to flow away from a politician, no dams or floodgates of words can stop it. The primaries and elections in Maine, Massachusetts and Michigan have shown that anti-New Deal sentiment is rolling up like a snowball across the country. Republicans and Democrats alike have turned to the leadership of Alf Landon, a man who makes no promises he does not intend to fulfill.

American citizens as a whole have no use for the Socialist gang surrounding Mr. Roosevelt. And Democrats have been quick to see the nominee of their party is so unmindful of that party's really high ideals, he would bargain away its birthright to outside groups in the attempt to re-election.

Your Taxes — Direct and Indirect

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

Students of government and its increasing demands on the family pocketbook have been pointing out in recent months the disproportionate spread between direct and indirect taxes.

As recently as 1929, they report, the Federal government collected approximately one-third of its income from hidden or indirect taxes, and two-thirds from open or direct taxes.

By 1935, the picture had reversed itself. Then, almost two-thirds of Federal income came from hidden taxes, and approximately one-third from direct taxes.

To the average householder this contrast is significant. Why?

Because, while direct taxes are levied principally on income, gifts, inheritances and the like, indirect taxes worm their way into bills for clothing, food, shelter and other purchases necessary to the American family.

Although ostensibly directed at other incomes, they hit the average worker's earnings after a sort of multiple pass from politician to producer, to retailer, to consumer. Unwittingly they are paid over the counter by the American housewife whenever she buys for the home. Thus lurking in the price of so many necessities, they add insidiously to the cost of living.

Hidden taxes are by no means new. They have been gnawing at American workers' earnings for many years. But the serious thing today is their expansion—with its consequent burden on the family income.

Yet the burden can be lessened.

Developed to their present proportions to help finance huge and often wasteful expenditures by politicians, hidden taxes can be reduced by cutting such waste.

That, of course, is the politicians' job. But it isn't their responsibility alone.

It's the responsibility of us, the people, to tell the politicians—who, under the Constitution, are subject to our control—that such waste, with its consequent raid on the family purse, must end. Or else!

Big News in the Making

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THERE are strong indications that the time is not far distant when a vital important step toward world recovery can be taken. At last it really looks as if France were going to devalue the franc, and bring it into a stable adjustment with the pound sterling and the dollar.

Last week the Finance Committee of the League of Nations, which is dominated by the French and the British, made this recommendation. There is much private but reasonably reliable information that the Blum government now recognizes that devaluation is necessary. There is no ground for doubting that the French government has already received assurances from London and from Washington that if France devalues moderately, the pound and the dollar will not be devalued further.

There would seem to remain only the question of how to carry out the devaluation in an orderly way. That involves for the French a change of public opinion similar to that which was effected in Great Britain in 1931 and in the United States in 1933. M. Blum, like the British conservatives and like Mr. Roosevelt, was elected on a pledge not to let the currency depreciate. Like them, he has to reverse his position.

It has been one of the great curiosities of the world crisis that almost everywhere the extreme conservatives and the extreme radicals have been opposed to a readjustment of currencies. In France, for example, it has been the parties of the Right and the Communists who have insisted on what is called the defense of the franc. It is from the liberal parties of the Center that the opinion for devaluation has come. Among the nations, those which are securely liberal, democratic, and capitalistic, like the Scandinavian nations, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Britain and the British dominions, have long since readjusted their currencies, have emerged from the depression, and have gone a long way toward restoring domestic peace and confidence. On the other hand, the dictatorships have "defended" their currencies by all manner of stringent government decrees.

The evidence is now overwhelming, it seems to me, that in the storm which struck the world in 1929, the paramount measure for the defense of free institutions and of the capitalist order has been to readjust the currency to the changed value of gold and to stop the deflation by expanding credit and by reducing the rate of interest. The countries which have done that have had their difficulties. But their recovery has been sufficient to make their difficulties manageable by democratic methods. The countries which have not done that have come to the edge or have gone over the edge of the abyss. In 1931 in Germany, capitalism was strangled by an intolerable deflation which ended in the loss of German liberties. In France in recent years the same kind of strangulation has taken place, and France has been menaced with grave social disorder.

It is, therefore, a great relief to hear that France is likely to abandon its gallant but suicidal policy of deflation and that it may soon take its place along with the free countries that have surmounted the depression. If the experience of those other countries is a guide, it is not socialism but a currency and credit readjustment which can most quickly relieve the social difficulties of France. The measures that M. Blum has been taking thus far can lead him only deeper and deeper into the morass of a controlled economy on the German and Italian pattern. A readjustment of the French currency can lead him in the direction which has been taken so successfully by all the free nations of the world.

The revaluation of the franc is of vital concern not only to France but to the other nations. For only when it takes place will an effective stabilization of the leading currencies be practicable, and only on the foundation of such a stabilization can there be an improvement in international trade.

Governor Landon will do well to watch these developments attentively. For they may have a great bearing on what he has to say about the tariff and about farm policy. He had better not make commitments now in the hope of capturing votes along the Canadian border which a month hence will leave him in the awkward position of being an economic isolationist in a world which has at last the prospect of restoring international trade, of being an economic restrictionist in a world where free enterprise can be resumed.

At Portland he left himself uncommitted, uncommitted by the reactionary part of his own platform and by the reactionary traditions of his own party, to take an affirmative part in a general movement to promote world recovery and thus to relieve the political tension of the world. With events moving as rapidly as they are at this moment, it would be a pity indeed if he compromised his freedom of action.

Communists and The New Deal

By MARK SULLIVAN

President Roosevelt and Mr. Hearst are both accurate in what they say to each other. Mr. Hearst says that Mr. Roosevelt is being supported by the Communists. That is true. Communist leaders in America have said repeatedly that they regard re-election of Mr. Roosevelt and defeat of Governor Landon as best furthering the ultimate Communist objective. In turn, President Roosevelt says, through his secretary, that he "does not want and does not welcome the vote or support of any individual or group taking orders from alien sources." That is also true. If Mr. Roosevelt were known to "ask" or "welcome" Communist support, the knowledge would be seriously detrimental to his candidacy.

This exchange of asperities will have a certain amount of force in the campaign. To the thoughtful, the incident will achieve its greatest value if it serves to call attention to the largest question before America. That question is the relation of America to the revolutionary changes going on in Europe. Specifically, the question is, can the developments in Europe go on to their end without infecting the United States?

What has happened in Europe can be put in a few sentences, though brevity makes precise definition impossible. Beginning in Russia in 1917, a new form of society called communism was set up. At once communism began an effort to impose itself on other countries. Wherever communism became a serious threat, another new conception of society, Fascism, arose to resist. The outstanding characteristic of Fascism, distinguishing it from communism is that Fascism permits private ownership of property. In most other respects Fascism and communism have much in common. Both make use of dictatorship as the mechanism of government. Both deny most of the liberties and individual rights which in America are guaranteed by the Constitution, which America takes for granted as much as the air we breathe. To America, both communism and Fascism are utterly alien. To all but a very small number of Americans, both are equally odious.

In Europe, after nineteen years, the sum of developments is that communism is firmly rooted in Russia (though lately it has modified itself slightly), and Fascism is firmly rooted in Italy and Germany. In Spain there is savage civil war between the two. In France there is political and intellectual conflict between the two ideals, with the communist ideal growing.

Here are five out of the six large countries of Europe (together with some smaller countries) subjected to one or the other of the new conceptions, or battlegrounds on which the two contend. Everybody agrees that the tide of social revolution is still rising.

For America, the question is, can we ride through this storm without taking on some variation of either Communism or Fascism and without becoming a battleground on which the two contend? It is a living question and a growing one. The European political terms "Left" and "Right" have become, during the last few years, almost as familiar as "Democrat" and "Republican." The terms "Communism" and "Fascism" are becoming familiar; there is hardly a political speech that does not mention them. The most explosive development in the present campaign is the charge that one of the candidates is supported by Communists.

If any one knows which outcome of this campaign is the best to avoid what has happened in Europe, that is the outcome America ought to seek. There is a school of thought which asserts that Mr. Roosevelt has the best way, that his alternate veering to left and right is a good sailor's method of weathering the world storm. This is probably the best argument made for Mr. Roosevelt's course as President, and for his re-election. The difficulty is, the net of Mr. Roosevelt's course finds him at the end of four years, pointed in the direction which the country wants to avoid, and which he says he wants to avoid. When the Communist leaders say they want Mr. Roosevelt re-elected, we must assume they know what is best for their purpose.

What causes the Communists to prefer Mr. Roosevelt is not, mainly, any direct steps he has taken toward Communism. Communist Presidential candidate Browder says himself that Mr. Roosevelt is "capitalist-minded." Mr. Roosevelt's service to the social revolutionists lies mainly in his stirring up of class hatred. Class hatred is the soil in which revolution thrives. For the moment Mr. Roosevelt's speeches are mild. But the spirit of his speeches as a whole is passion-provoking. After he delivered his address to Congress last January, even his devoted former aid and present supporter, General Hugh Johnson, said the address was "a rabble rouser . . . deliberate appeal to passion . . . the joy of every advocate of class hatred here and in Russia." . . .

That speech, we may assume, and others similar, and the expectation that Mr. Roosevelt will make still others like it—that is probably the main reason the Communists want Mr. Roosevelt re-elected.

There is a school which feels that to avoid social upheaval election of Governor Landon is the best outcome of the campaign. This may be true if stated with a necessary qualification. If Governor Landon should be elected, and if he should be a mere stand-pat conservative trying to take the country back to old conditions, he would not avoid social commotion; he would further it. The American system imperatively needs certain modifications. The expectation that Governor Landon knows this and will bring the modifications about is the best argument for those who support him.

New Deal Borrowings

In June, 1932, the total outstanding loans of the banks of the nation was $28,090,000,000, of which $6,456,000,000 was government obligation. In June, 1935, under the New Deal, the outstanding loans of the banks was $20,419,000,000, of which $14,284,000,000 was government obligations.

Cotton Checks

Big cotton planters in the South received generous helpings of government funds for not growing cotton. Forty-six received more than $10,000 each and one was sent a check for $123,000; 1,131 received checks of over $2,500 each and then of the little fellows, 732,075 received an average of $46.00 each.

Foreign Pork

Under orders from the Roosevelt administration American farmers killed their pigs and brood sows, and in 1935 foreign farmers shipped more than twelve and one-half million pounds of pork into the American market.

Reduced Automobile Licenses

Alf Landon, as governor of Kansas, reduced the automobile license fee by 50 per cent, and increased the total amount collected by seeing to it that every owner of a car paid the reduced price.

Cheap imitations of American farm and factory products, competing with our own goods at prices far under, in some instances, the cost of American labor, appear side by side with Amercan goods in the above travelling tariff exhibit truck now touring the States of New York and Pennsylvania under Republican party auspices. Mr. Roscoe C. Harper, formerly of the United States Treasury Department, is in command. By this means the story of lowered tariff barriers is told in language unmistakably clear. The inserts above show in more detail the type of exhibits carried on the truck. Perhaps the most significant is that of identical American and Japanese hinges, which sell at $3.50 and $1.35 respectively in the United States. The significance of this exhibit arises from the fact that Japanese hinges of this type have been used extensively on Federal W. P. A. projects.

Inspection Shows County Jail Kept in Excellent Shape by Cornell

The following inspection report has been received from the State Commission of Correction:

Inspected September 4, 1936. Fred Cornell, sheriff. Mrs. Cornell is matron. Male officers are actively on duty at the jail at all hours.

Population

There were 55 inmates at the time of inspection—the largest number this year. They were classified as follows:

	Male Adults	Male Minors	Female Adults
Serving sentence	37	2	2
Awaiting court action	11	2	1

Prisoners were properly classified.

Plant

The jail was clean and in order throughout.

Since the last inspection hard-surfaced roads have been constructed around the county property and the shower bath stalls have been repainted.

The windows on the first floor should be screened with stout screens of about No. 12 gauge wire with a one-half inch mesh to prevent the passing in of contraband; fly screens should be provided on all windows.

Personal Hygiene

There are receiving rooms on the first floor for both males and females. Prisoners must bathe on admission and male prisoners receive an issue of institution clothiing; their street clothing is sterilized, tagged and stored until their discharge. Weekly bathing is a minimum requirement, bedding, towels and clothing are laundered weekly in the jail laundry.

There is a supply of safety razors in the office, issued for use under supervision; haircutting is done by "handy" prisoners.

Employment

There is plenty of employment at institutional work, unloading coal for county buildings, farming, and laundering for the jail, county farm and tuberculosis sanatorium.

Meals

Three meals a day are served, prisoners eating in the cell corridors. The storeroom was well stocked with food which appeared to be of good quality. A copy of the current weekly menu is attached hereto for filing. Cooking in cells is not permitted. Inmates may purchase only candy and tobacco.

Medical

The jail physician is regularly appointed; he visits the jail once or twice a week and is subject to call at all times.

Purchases for the Jail

The county purchasing agent has charge of purchases for the jail. It was admitted they are not made from the State penal institutions as required by law. The purchasing agent should be advised of the provisions of the Correction Law relative to purchase of articles made in the State Penal institutions.

Visits, Mail, Packages, Money and Valuables of Inmates

All visits are held in the modern visiting booths.

Both incoming and outgoing mail is censored, prisoners signing waivers permitting the sheriff or his agents to open mail addressed to them.

Packages are searched.

Money and valuables of inmates are stored in the office in envelopes on which is listed a summary of such items, signed by the prisoner.

Religious Services

Clergymen of the respective faiths visit the jail frequently.

Disciplinary Procedure

Prisoners who commit serious breaches of discipline are segregated in a room without furnishings, the physician visiting them regularly.

Records

The jailer's records were in good order.

Recommendations

1. That the windows be screened to exclude flies, also additional stout screens be installed on the first floor windows to prevent the introduction of contraband.
2. That the provisions of the Correction Law relative to the purchase of articles made in the State penal institutions be observed.

Respectfully submitted,
Katherine Bowes,
Commissioner,
State Commission of Correction.

Truck Exhibiting Foreign-Made Goods Barred From Iowa Fair

If it's WPA sponsored, it's non-partisan and non-censorable and therefore not liable to corrupt the good farm folk of the Middlewest. If it is of Republican origin, even remotely and although it may be designed just to reveal to the Grangers the dangers of the flood of foreign farm and food products, then it's dangerous to the morale, not to say morals of the humble tillers of the soil. At least that is the meaning competent commentators have read into a recent episode at the Spencer, Iowa, County Fair.

The WPA had a sponsored exhibit on the fair grounds. Along came the traveling exhibit of the Republican National Committee. This exhibit, assembled at the cost of several thousand dollars, is a display of foreign-made goods and farm products, imported under New Deal reciprocal trade agreements, and sold cheaply in this country to the disadvantage of the American farmer and manufacturer.

Francis J. Clark, lecturer with the truck, applied for permission to show the exhibit within the fair grounds. This permission was refused on the grounds that all exhibits must be non-partisan, despite the fact that the WPA exhibit, a huge display in the form of a chart showing the thousands of projects sponsored by the WPA, the PWA, the CCC, the HOLC and other New Deal experiments, was given the preferred place within the grounds. It was of course incidental that the fair grounds have been kept in repair with the aid of WPA money.

However, the fair ground board was adamant and the exhibit of foreign-made goods was not permitted within the gates, thereby saving the Grangers from miles around from being corrupted by the sight of so much goods made in Europe and sold in the United States at prices far less than Americans can produce them.

The traveling exhibit is mounted on an 18-foot truck and shows some 300 products that have been coming into this country under the reciprocal trade agreements secretly negotiated and promulgated by President Roosevelt. It left Chicago about three weeks ago for a 16,000 mile tour throughout the Middlewest and East. Several hundred thousand farmers have already seen the exhibit.

While the fair grounds board succeeded in preventing the corruption of the farmers, it was apparently all right as an exhibit for city folks. The exhibit was driven to a street intersection in the town where Mr. Clair delivered his lecture. Later the exhibit was shown at Harlem, Iowa, where the local Democratic Committee circulated unsigned handbills, censuring the exhibit. The lecturer refuted the handbills by quoting from government reports to prove the indictment of the New Deal's disastrous trade agreements.

Bigger Enrollment Expected at Bath Collegiate Center

Everything indicates the Bath Collegiate Center will have a much larger enrollment of students this year than it has had in the past. This increase in the enrollment is attributed to the fact that the people in Steuben County are becoming aware of the existence of the Center and the educational opportunities which it offers to them. This year, high school graduates from almost every secondary school in Steuben County have made application for admission. Haverling High School still continues to lead individual schools in representation at the Bath Center but the combined representation of the other schools in Steuben County will undoubtedly be in the majority this year.

Registration at the Bath Collegiate Center began Monday, September 28th, and continues during the week. Students wishing to register should appear at the Haverling High School building in Bath between the hours of 4 to 6 p. m. or 7 to 9 p. m. on any day of this week.

Poultry Feeding Course Offered

Because of the relatively high high cost of grain and of other feeds, Cornell's third annual poultry feeding school, October 27 to 29, is said to come at a fortunate time this year. Studies at the college have shown that, over a period of years, feed costs make up fifty per cent or more of all costs of keeping poultry.

The school offers new facts and ideas to help poultrymen to feed their hens better and to save money. Information about this three-day course may be had from the poultry department at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Daily lectures and discussions are on the program, and all persons have a chance to take part. On the staff of instruction are members of the poultry department at Cornell, R. M. Bethke of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, and J. E. Hunter of Pennsylvania State College.

A few of the subjects to be discussed during the three-day period include: Some field problems in feeding poultry; new information on the nature of vitamin D and its application to poultry feeding; research in animal nutrition at Cornell; feeding management during the pullet year; feeding growing chicks; what to consider in changing rations to meet price changes; the influence of the breeding ration on the hatching of eggs and vitality of chicks; and the poultry situation and outlook with special reference to poultry feed materials.

Pastures and Meadows Continue to Gain

Good progress was made in wheat seeding, and pastures and meadows continued to gain up to the week ending September 22, according to a summary of weather and crop conditions in New York State.

The last half of the week was generally fair and favorable for farm week, the report says. Some third cuttings of alfalfa were made, but the yield was rather light. Silo filling advanced rapidly, although some farmers are holding off to obtain as much growth as possible.

"Late sown buckwheat will need considerable time before it matures. Potatoes are beginning to blight where rains have been heavy, and digging has begun in some sections. Some beans have been harvested and some complaint noted that the beans are not filling well. Cabbage has improved but is still undersized.

"Onions have done better than last year, but the yields of sweet corn, tomatoes for canneries and carrots have been rather light. Apples are maturing earlier than usual, especially in the drier sections of the state. Apples in general are a light crop, and many places have none at all because of the late spring freeze."

The report is issued weekly by the weather bureau maintained at Cornell by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Miss Louise Phillips of Geneseo was a week-end guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis.

Eagle Hotel to Be Repaired Soon

Announcement was made to the Advertiser yesterday that the old Eagle Hotel will be rebuilt in the near future. The Eagle was badly wrecked by an explosion last winter which tore out the south east corner of the building.

Heirs of the Dennis J. O'Keefe estate brought suit against the Cities Service Company, which they claimed to be responsible for the explosion. A few days ago the Cities Service Company made a settlement out of court and the owners of the building have been paid a substantial sum to pay them for the loss. Dennis O'Keefe stated yesterday that the work of repairing and rebuilding the damaged hotel would start soon.

Mrs. Chappell To Celebrate Her 90th Birthday

Mrs. Chappell was born in 1846 at Round Top, Pa., where she resided for about twenty-two years. She then moved to Mansfield for a short length of time and from there to Knoxville where she resided until she moved to Addison.

Mrs. Chappell's maiden name was Ella A. Hardy. She first married George W. Robertson of Knoxville. Mr. Robertson at that time owned a grocery store. When the war broke out all the young men left to join the army, leaving no one to escort the girls to the different doings. So once in a while one of the younger boys of the neighborhood would hitch old "Dobbin" to the wagon and take us for a 'hen party'."

Steuben County Home Bureau

Membership Drive Closes with County Rally

The membership drive of the Steuben County Home Bureau, which was started September 1st, will close with a countrywide gathering on Wednesday, October 7th. The rally will begin with a tureen dinner served promptly at noon at the Grange Hall in Howard. Special luncheon arrangements are being made by vice chairmen of the various local Home Bureau units.

Mrs. Gordon Conderman of Howard, who is in charge of arrangements for the meeting has already communicated with unit vice chairmen in regard to plans for the entertainment for the afternoon. Immediately following luncheon there will be a program of stunts put on by the women themselves. Rally Day is just a grand good time for everyone to get acquainted and to welcome the new members.

Immediately following the entertainment will come the awarding of prizes. The three units having the most women at the rally will receive special awards. Membership prizes will go to units having the highest percentage of new members; a first and second award in each.

Membership returns may be sent to the Home Bureau Office previous to October 7th or may be brought on that day to the Rally.

Last year's rally was a huge success and reports from various units planning to charter buses in which to bring their members point toward a repetition of last year's exciting good time.

Specialist To Meet Leaders

Miss Evelyn Nance, foods and nutrition specialist from the College of Home Economics, will be in the country next week to meet with leaders from the local Home Bureau unit. This will be the first in a series of three lessons on Entertaining at Home, a project requested last year by a large majority of the units in the county.

Miss Nance is new to Steuben County but she is beginning her second year of work as foods and nutrition specialist. Her training and experience include special college work, home economics teaching, and a number of years of service as Home Bureau agent in Ulster County, New York State.

This first meeting in the series will be devoted to a discussion of how the complete project will be carried on and making plans for the other two meetings. It is essential that leaders plan to attend the meeting of their own district. On October 6th the discussion will be held in the Savona Central School for leaders from the eastern district of the county. On October 8th, leaders from the western district of the county will meet at the church in Howard. Both meetings will begin promptly at 1:30 and close promptly at 4:00.

Women To Learn To Use Rush For Chair Seats

A special school for rush seating of chairs will be held at the Canisteo Grange Hall on Friday and Saturday, October 9th and 10th. These meetings are being planned by the Steuben County Home Bureau and the instruction will be given by Mrs. J. L. Marvin of Centerville.

For a good many years rush seating of chairs was nearly a lost art but now that the old chairs are being refinished and brought back into service many women are interested in knowing how to put in this durable and beautiful type of seat. The use of rush is one of the most inexpensive methods of chair seating as the material may be gathered late in the summer and easily cured.

Women planning to attend the lessons are asked to be on hand promptly at 10:00 o'clock, Friday morning, October 9th. Each woman will need to bring her own chair or stool frame with the old seat torn out and all ready for the new seat. She should also bring an old pair of shears, a ruler, and a blunt screw driver. Those attending are asked to bring their own lunch—coffee will be served.

For the third successive year Frank Finnerty of the Addison High School has been elected chairman of the county group of teachers of agriculture. It is the custom to rotate this office among the different teachers, but it was requested by the group that no change be made because so much has been accomplished during the past two years.

Among the accomplishments are monthly meetings of all county agricultural teachers where discussions on current topics are held; uniform F. F. A. sports program; the organization of county groups of F. F. A. chapters and the enlargement of the Future Farmer part of the Bath Fair.

Woodhull Grange Holds Open Meet

Woodhull Grange had an open meeting Saturday evening, following a chicken supper. Proceeds of the supper were about $13.

At the meeting William Campbell gave an interesting talk on "County Government Is Our Greatest Extravagance." He spoke highly of the local supervisor, Roy Herrington, who has striven to lower county expense and whose salary for 1935 was $400 as against $4000 which was paid another supervisor. He is also quoted as saying the highway department under present management is the biggest waste in Steuben County. From 1917 to 1923 the county was free of debt but at present has an indebtedness of one and one-half million dollars and unless the county is kept under control it will be bankrupt.

Mr. Campbell states there are 38 supervisors in the county and that the number and duties of county officers vary, the usual list includes: a county judge, sheriff, surrogate, district attorney and in some cases a county attorney, county clerk, coroners, registrars, assessors, welfare commissioners, tax collectors, county superintendent of highways, together with their deputies and clerks, which in many cases are wives, daughters, sons, brothers, uncles, cousins and often times the whole family.

He spoke highly of the county manager form of administration as conducted in Henrico County, Va. advocating such reform for Steuben County.

Supervisor Forrest Loper of Jasper, a former Woodhull young man, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, was commended for his efficient work for the betterment of the county.

Considerable applause followed Mr. Campbell's talk. Many out of town people attended the meeting.

A short program was given as follows:

Song, "Sowing the Seeds"

Instrumental Numbers, "Boots and Saddle" and "Coming Around the Mountain"—piano accordion and guitar—Wilson and Wilbur Horton.

Reading, "Corn Song" and "That Boosting Biz," Mrs. Bert McCaslin

Vocal Duet, "Nobody's Darling but Mine," Irena and Pauline Cook

Poem, "Team Work," Minnie Husted

Instrumental, "Somebody Waits for Me," Wilson and Wilbur Horton

Closing song, "America."

Wears Sunflower—Loses WPA Job

TIONESTA, Pa.—O'Neil C. Cook wore his Landon sunflower on his WPA job. In three days he was fired, despite the fact that he had been taken from the relief rolls and was in need. "No man can work a Roosevelt job and be for the other side," the WPA foreman told him, handing him the note shown above. His companion WPA workers were wearing Democratic buttons, supplied by their foreman. They are still working.

Let's See You Arrest Landon, Mr. Cummings

Chicago. — The attempt of the Roosevelt administration to frighten small store keepers from showing cards calling attention to the amount of invisible tax items concealed in the cost of nearly everything the average family needs is an indication that the question of taxation and waste is of paramount importance in this campaign.

This statement was made by Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National committee, who asked Attorney General Cummings what he intended to do to Gov. Landon because he said in his Buffalo speech:

"We cannot buy a stitch of clothing without the government's taking in taxes a part of the money we pay out. We cannot buy an ounce of food at our grocery stores without being taxed to support the government. We cannot go to a movie, or to a baseball game, or ride in an automobile without this invisible tax arm of the government reaching out and taking a part of the money we spend.

"These hidden taxes — federal, state and local—amount to about 20 cents out of every dollar we spend. In the case of the Federal Government alone they amount to more than $5 a month for every family."

Living Costs Rise

New York. — Costs of clothing have risen 21 per cent and costs of rent 24 per cent since the spring of 1933, when President Roosevelt was inaugurated, according to the National Industrial Conference board.

Col. Frank Knox

Here is the aggressive Republican candidate for the vice-presidency, as seen by the artist Alfred Panepinto.

Taxes Soar in 1935

Washington.—Nearly one-fifth of the national income was absorbed by federal, state and local taxes in 1935, as compared with about one-eighth at the beginning of the depression. Government expenditures, federal state and local, represented about 30 per cent of the national income, more than double the percentage a dozen years ago.

Landon Pledges Farm Security

Wants Economy of Plenty, Not Scarcity; Promises Drouth Aid.

DES MOINES, Iowa.—"I believe the American farmer should be a lord on his own farm," Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas told a capacity crowd at the State Fair grounds here, in a speech that was a complete assertion of his belief in the economics of plenty, as opposed to the Roosevelt administration's economics of scarcity.

Gov. Landon's solution of what he termed a "national problem" and not simply a "farm problem" was founded directly upon the Republican party's platform. He pledged himself to support of the family type farm and to cash benefit payments limited to the production level of such a farm, to give agriculture an equal footing with industries protected by the tariff. He promised to take care of farmers hit by drouth.

He committed himself to the fulfillment of all contracts made with farmers by the present administration. He promised to call upon the statesmen of both parties to work with agricultural leaders in the preparation of new legislation, if he is elected. And going beyond the bounds of the platform, he advocated the fullest possible development of crop insurance.

Pledges Benefit Payments.

"If I am elected," Gov. Landon promised, "I shall fulfill all outstanding obligations made by the present administration with the American farmer. By this I mean that those who have carried out their end of the bargain will receive the checks due them.

"Those of our farmers hard hit by the drouth will be generously provided for until they can raise a crop. This means the continuation of relief checks!"

Farmers producing a normally exportable surplus of such staple products as hogs, wheat, cotton and tobacco are handicapped by tariff protections which are effective only when there is a shortage, Gov. Landon said.

Would Offset Foreign Competition.

"The Republican party," declared Gov. Landon, "proposes to offset these disadvantages by the payment of cash benefits. These cash benefits will be limited to the production level of the family type farm.

"As part of the plan for removing the depression effect of surpluses I shall propose an amendment to the federal warehousing act so that reserves of feed, such as corn, can be carried on the farm.

"Under this amendment the farmer who stores his grain on the farm, in such a way as to make it insurable, will be entitled to a federal warehouse receipt. He will then be eligible to borrow from any banking agency. He will enjoy the same credit facilities as are available to the owners of grain stored in terminal markets. The grain would be stored on the farm, ready for use or sale at any time the farmer cares to take up the loan."

Here Gov. Landon declared that he could not agree with a policy like that of the AAA, which attempts permanent control of American agriculture from Washington.

He charged that the administration, after four years, was still without a workable plan for agriculture. "It's right back where it started from!" he said. "Soil conservation—real conservation—is a subject close to my heart."

Gov. Landon reminded his listeners that two years ago he had suggested to the Roosevelt administration a comprehensive program of joint federal and state action, but that it had not been adopted.

He said the country's 34 billion dollar debt under President Roosevelt "can be paid only by taxation if this is to remain an honest government. Taxes add to the cost of everything and the farmer is so situated that he cannot escape their penalty. Further, the taxes reduce the ability of the consumer to buy the products of the farm. The Republican party proposes to put an end to the present waste and extravagance."

Insurance Congress Fears Roosevelt Financial Policy

NEW YORK.—Alarmed by the financial policies of the Roosevelt administration which "seriously impair income necessary for the security of life insurance reserves" the National Fraternal Congress of America recently went on record as opposed to these policies.

Representing five million holders of fraternal insurance policies in America valued at five billion dollars, the congress passed the resolution without a dissenting vote:

"Unless the administration's policies are changed or stopped, the millions of policyholders in this country will suffer irreparable injury."

1936 Election Slogan

"Look at Spain and vote like Maine."

FARLEY FINANCE

Washington. — William W Howes, first assistant postmaster general, testifying before the house committee on appropriations, admits a deficit of $90,000,000. Last year Postmaster General Farley said that the postal department made a profit of $5,000,000, whereas an audited account of the department showed an actual deficit of $65,000,000. Washington is awaiting with interest Mr. Farley's forthcoming annual report.

Relief Money Finances Propaganda Magazine

Washington.—To its many other propaganda activities carried on with relief funds and which include motion picture production, staging propaganda plays for the theater, radio broadcasts and the usual run of press agent handouts, Harry Hopkins' WPA has now added that of publishing a full-fledged magazine.

The publication is of standard magazine size and lavishly illustrated. President Roosevelt has alloted $612,339.50 for the magazine, known as Building America, but which appears in the official records as Works Progress Administration project 65-97-295 and is screened by the words "covering various educational studies."

In spite of all that the New Deal has had to say in denunciation of the power companies for spending money "collected from the public" to pay for a private ownership campaign in the schools, it develops that "Building America" is designed largely for circularizing schools and colleges. A large part of the first issue is devoted to the power question but treated, of course, from the New Deal point of view.

Included in the list of worthwhile references recommended by the magazine is a book published by the League of Industrial Democracy, which is the collegiate wing of the Socialist party. Norman Thomas is an executive director of the league.

Report Reveals Huge Cost of Hidden Taxes

New York.—Working members of the family with a $2,500 annual income now have to work a little more than a month out of every year to earn the money to pay hidden taxes caused by the rising costs of government, the Guaranty Trust company of this city reports in a study of the tax drain on low incomes. This does not cover income taxes or any other form of direct tax.

"Those whose incomes are moderately low, and who believe that government disbursements are made mostly for their benefit and are paid chiefly by the more prosperous citizens, have been pathetically indifferent to the part they play in government financial activities," says the report.

Persons in the lower income bracket are realizing more and more that government expenditures are made with money that has been taken from individuals, says the Guaranty. The study revealed that indirect taxes which can be traced take $183 a year from the average family of four with a $2,500 income, or $219 if the family owns an automobile.

Heifers should receive supplemental feeds in sections of New York State that have dry pastures.

New Deal Cost $1,250 a Family

More to Come, Says House Minority Leader; Raps Extravagance.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Roosevelt administration will have spent 32 billion, 675 million dollars by the time this congress adjourns, Bertrand Snell, representative from New York, told the house during the debate on the 803 million dollar tax bill.

"This means that the New Deal will have to take $1,250 from every family in the United States," he said. "And the money has been spent in a wasteful, extravagant manner," he added.

Ridicules Financial Progress.

Citing the mounting deficits, Snell said:

"Three times we have been told in the President's budget messages no new taxes would be required, and in each instance we have been called upon later in the same session to pass a new tax bill.

"All this proves beyond doubt that the administration does not have the slightest semblance of a financial program. Its nearest approach to a budget policy is to spend all the money it can gather in or borrow, in as many ways as possible."

Carry Issue to People.

Minority leaders decided to carry to the people at the November elections the issues raised by the President's new "corporation surplus" tax bill.

"It is a question to put squarely before the people," Snell declared.

"If the people decide that thrift in business and saving for a rainy day is bad policy then they can endorse the new taxes by their votes. I am confident that they will conclude otherwise."

Reveal Wallace Employee Reaped Cotton Profits

Washington.—Outstanding among the beneficiaries of the AAA cotton payments has been a $5,000,000 British controlled cotton-growing concern, whose $42,000-a-year president was also one of the ranking officials of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, it was revealed here when the publication of the names of recipients of AAA payments in excess of $10,000 were demanded from Secretary Wallace.

Oscar Johnston, president of the Delta & Pine Land Co., of Scott, Miss., which is controlled by the Fine Spinners and Doublers association of Manchester, England, is also manager of the federal cotton pool. He is also a director and vice president of the Commodity Credit corporation.

Johnston's cotton-raising firm, it was revealed, has benefited from federal loans up to $84,000, and has received $177,947 for not raising

Landon Still Favored in Grass-Root Straw Vote

End of Fifth Week Balloting in Nation-Wide Presidential Poll Shows GOP Candidate Leading in Twenty-Eight States and Roosevelt in Eight—Ohio, Oklahoma and North Dakota Change Columns.

New York, Sept. 25—The stretch run in the 1936 Presidential race is now under way.

Five weeks from next Tuesday, November 3, the race will end. The respective candidates will pass the judges' stand and the official decision will then be handed down.

In the running of this national election derby, once every four years, the government-minded citizens have been enabled to learn of the progress of their favorite candidates as the race grew hot through the medium of the straw vote.

Various straw-vote reports may differ at points but each can do no more, and always almost does, fairly accurately indicate the trend of political sentiment in the field from which it is taken.

In the small towns and country America, Governor Alf Landon, Republican candidate, continues to lead the field in the Presidential straw-vote poll being conducted by some 3,000 weekly newspapers which are located in states throughout the country.

More than half a million ballots have been cast in this poll, from 41 states in all, but only in sufficient number to be tabulated, state by state, from 36 states.

Local Vote

There was only a slight change in the standing of the presidential candidates in the ADVERTISER-SENTINEL poll this week. Landon gained a fraction of a point in the voting, while Roosevelt and the minor candidates lost fractionally during this, the 6th week of local participation in the poll.

Results of the local poll show conclusively that voters around Addison and Woodhull are overwhelming for turning the New Deal out of Washington. Sentiment reflected in the poll indicates Governor Landon will receive an unusually large vote from the people in Southern Steuben County.

Standing of the various candidates as the local poll enters its 7th week are as follows:

Landon	83.1%
Roosevelt	7.7
Lemke	3.2
Thomas	3.1
Colvin	1.5
Browder	1.4
	100. %

Five-Week Tabulations

The national tabulation of this vote has been carried forward for the past five weeks. At the close of the fifth week, the standing of the candidates is as follows:

Landon	396,230	58.3%
Roosevelt	241,868	35.6
Lemke	31,171	4.6
Thomas	5,028	0.7
Colvin	2,131	0.3
Browder	3,573	0.5
Totals	680,001	100%

As between the three leading candidates, only, Roosevelt, Landon and Lemke, the standing is:

Landon	396,230	59.2%
Roosevelt	241,868	36.1
Lemke	31,171	4.7
	669,269	100%

Between Roosevelt, Democratic, and Landon, Republican, the standing is:

Landon	396,230	62.1%
Roosevelt	241,868	37.9
	638,098	100%

The third, or Union party candidate, William Lemke, does not have a popular vote majority in any one of the 36 states shown in the state by state tabulations.

Of the 36 states, Governor Landon is leading in 28 states, while President Roosevelt has majorities in 8 states.

Oklahoma and North Dakota swung to the Roosevelt column during the fifth week of national tabulations, making a gain of one state as compared to the fourth week of tabulations. Ohio swung back into the Landon column with a majority of some 3400 votes.

The 8 states in which Roosevelt now leads are: Alabama, Florida, Idaho, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah.

The 28 states in which Landon has majorities are: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia, Wisconsin and Ohio.

The seven states which have sent in ballots, but not a sufficient number to warrant national tabulations, are: Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Mississippi, Nevada and New Mexico.

Percentage Changes

Only marginal percentage changes were recorded during the fifth week tabulations, as compared to fourth week returns. The Oklahoma and North Dakota votes for Roosevelt, plus a slightly heavier Democratic vote from several states, resulted in the following percentage gain for him.

	Last Week	This Week
Landon	63.6%	62.1%
Roosevelt	36.4	37.1

As between Landon, Roosevelt and Lemke:

Landon	60.6%	59.2%
Roosevelt	34.6	36.1
Lemke	4.8	4.7

Reports reaching national straw-vote headquarters here in the offices of the Publishers Autocaster Service, indicate that there is a wide interest in this poll because it reaches only the small town and farm voters and reflects the rural sentiment as it is recorded by the voters with their home town newspapers.

The keen interest being shown in this poll was reflected in national headquarters here by a fifth week rush of Roosevelt ballots, which if continued, will no doubt iron out some of the wide majorities piled up in Landon "hot spots", states where early voting was heavy on the GOP side.

The ADVERTISER and SENTINEL are cooperating in this nation-wide poll, thus offering their readers the opportunity of showing their fellow voters in other states who we here prefer for President during the next four years.

All legal voters are invited to clip the ballot, vote it as they wish, then mail or bring it to the ADVERTiser office. The local vote is announced weekly. The ballots are then sent to New York for national tabulation.

Voters are under no obligation to sign their names. The space on the ballot for the name of the town and state, from which you expect to vote in November, is placed there only to assist in an accurate national tabulation at straw-vote headquarters in New York.

If you haven't yet voted in this nation-wide presidential straw-vote, we suggest you do so at once. Clip and vote the ballot today for your favorite candidate.

Returns from 36 states, totaling 680,001 ballots, as received at National Straw-Vote Headquarters, New York, for tabulation at close of fifth week

Bureau Reports Shortage of Farm Labor

Applications for men to work on Steuben County farms far exceed the supply, the farm bureau reports, and calls attention to the shortage of farm help.

Potato growers are especially concerned about the help situation. Because of the drought which stopped growth during the summer and the recent late rains, potato vines are still green and the tubers immature. Digging will be delayed a week or ten days and the period of harvest will be shorter than usual.

Men who want farm employment are urged to apply to the farm bureau office at Bath. Applications are on file for experienced single and married men on good farms at good wages. The potato harvest is expected to begin about the first of October for which hundreds of workers will be needed.

New York has led all other states in "proving" sires of dairy cows during the past six years, and this year is seen as the biggest of all.

Sports Authority to Pick Football Winners For Local Readers

Leo Bolley, one of the country's outstanding sports authorities, today starts a new and unusual football feature in this paper.

Each week Bolley will select the "Ten Best Games" of the coming Saturday from the viewpoint of an up-State football fan. He will predict the winners and back-up his choices with his expert opinions. The new column will be a regular feature of this paper during the football season.

Bolley is in close touch with all developments in the world of football and his thorough knowledge of the game will enable him to aid the football fan in making his own selections.

Before becoming a sports reporter, Bolley was a football star himself. As a backfield ace at Elmira Free Academy he was picked on the All-State Scholastic team. Then followed a brilliant gridiron career at Niagara University.

He got his baptism of football fire in a game against Colgate and he was one of the stars of the 1926 Purple and White eleven that held Syracuse down to a 12 to 7 score.

Bolley played baseball and boxed in the professional ring—a background that enables him to speak with authority about sports.

His discussion of football throughout the country with emphasis on the New York State picture are worth the consideration of all fans.

The readers of this paper are fortunate in having the expert opinions of an authority of Bolley's calibre made available to them.

HINTS ON "SLIMMING"

Visions of becoming slim and of reducing, caused by new fall clothes, should be accompanied by common sense, says the New York State College of Home Economics. A person who wants to lose much weight should first consult a physician to see that the "slimming" process will not affect her health.

Suggestions on how to lose or to gain weight have been published by the college in bulletin E-329. Before starting on a diet, the college says not to expect to change weight magically overnight, for such quick results can not be attained safely, if at all. Flabby muscles, wrinkles and actual illness may result from the attempt to reduce too rapidly. To lose more than one to one and one-half pounds a week is not advisable, unless reducing is under the direction of a physician.

The first week or two of a reducing plan may bring unexpected results: as much as five pounds may be lost, or no change in weight may occur. This is because a loss of fat is often accompanied by a temporary shift in water balance in the body. If water is stored as fat is burned, there may be no apparent change in weight. If this does happen, courage, diet and exercise should be maintained, for in a short time results will come.

If, however, five or six pounds are lost the first week, it is wise not to be too optimistic, for this probably will not continue. It means that several pounds of stored water have probably been lost along with the fat and that after two or three weeks the loss in weight will settle down to a fairly regular rate.

This Week's 10 Best Games

By LEO BOLLEY

(Editor's Note: Every week in this paper Leo Bolley, former football star at Niagara University and now one of the best known experts in the sport reporting world, will discuss the ten best games for the coming week-end. Follow Bolley's predictions and be ahead of the crowd in football knowledge.)

TO sports writers, sports participants and sports fans 1935 was the banner year to date. Let me go on record now as saying 1936 will be greater in almost every way—especially in football.

First, the so-called smaller colleges are coming into their own—no longer are they the scrub teams for the big boys. Second, better high school coaching has promoted better collegiate play and training. Third, more dads, mothers, sisters and kid brothers are interested in the great Fall pastime. Fourth, no longer is the All-America team chosen exclusively from the Big Three, the Big Ten or the Big Anything. Now the smaller colleges all have a chance.

This is going to be fun, analyzing every week what I think are the ten best games of the coming Saturday from the viewpoint of up-State New York fans and trying to predict their results in advance. What do you think of these selections for this Saturday, October 3?

COLGATE - URSINUS: Andy Kerr, as usual, is crying the blues but the canny Scot will still have a creditable record and lick Ursinus. Too early in the season for Ursinus to meet that competition.

SYRACUSE - CLARKSON: Vic Hanson has had good records for the past two years losing only to Colgate. Clarkson is scrappy, especially against Bill Orange, but the odds are all against it.

HOBART - UNION: Too bad Union and Hobart are meeting so early in the season. I'd say Hobart, but close.

CORNELL - YALE: I pick the Blue to win against an up-and-coming Cornell team.

RENSSELAER - ALFRED: Rensselaer loses to Alfred. Too many experienced Alfred men for the Tech boys.

NOTRE DAME - CARNEGIE TECH: Notre Dame Ramblers will take over Carnegie Tech but there will be a battle.

PENNSYLVANIA-LAFAYETTE: Pennsylvania should find it easy taking on Lafayette so early in the season. U. of P. in a walk.

PRINCETON - WILLIAMS: The Tiger starts easy.

DARTMOUTH - VERMONT: Red Blaik's Indians start another tough seige with a win.

N.Y.U.-OHIO STATE: In spite of last year's narrow squeak Ohio State should not have much trouble this year.

We'll have another "ten best" bunch of hunches next week.

New Reflector Law Now Effective

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 28—The new reflector law will become effective on Thursday, October 1. Owners of cars not now equipped with "at least one adequate reflector securely attached to the rear" should meet the requirement, if the cars are to be operated in this State on or after October 1. If automobiles are now equipped with approved reflectors or tail lights with reflector glass; there is no need for another to meet the requirements.

The new equipment must have a minimum reflecting area of 5.7 square inches. Charles A. Harnett, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, has approved more than 40 separate reflectors and 70 tail light lenses which meet the requirements of the law.

Launch Program to Reduce Harvest Losses

Superior Quality Potatoes Aim of Farm Bureau Project

A program to reduce the loss from bruising and damage of potatoes in the harvest, is to be launched by the Steuben County Farm Bureau in a series of meetings to be held next week.

The records show that ten per cent of the Steuben County potato crop is seriously damaged in the harvest, resulting in lower prices to growers and the loss of markets to the region. This situation is especially important this year in view of the high price at which potatoes will sell.

Simple and practical ways of reducing damage in the digging and harvesting of potatoes are to be demonstrated at meetings to be held on the farm of Clair Bennett, Howard, in the forenoon and on the farm of C. A. Slaght of Greenwood in the afternoon of October 6.

Similar demonstrations will be given on the farm of Leonard Drake of Prattsburg in the forenoon and C. D. Wolcott of Cohocton in the afternoon of October 7. The morning meetings begin promptly at 10:30, the afternoon sessions start at two o'clock.

Included in the program are E. V. Hardenburg, well known potato authority of the College of Agriculture, and Prof. C. N. Turner of the Department of Engineering. An up-to-the minute report on the crop and price situation will be presented at each meeting.

Enjoy Best Things In Community Life

Pioneers of colonial days had to endure isolation, but the farmer of today who would enjoy the best things in rural life just joins with his fellows in community life, says Professor Dwight Sanderson of the department of rural social organization at Cornell University.

To obtain most from an organization, he points out, every member should think more about what he can put into it rather than what he can take out. Real satisfaction comes from the friendship of others, and from the feeling of success through combined effort.

"To enjoy membership in an organization, the member must attend its meetings, take part in its work, support its chosen leaders, and do what he can to promote a spirit of solidarity and loyalty to its purposes."

Any organization has four kinds of members, he notes. These are the leaders, the lieutenants, the rank-and-file, and the hangers-on.

"The leaders are usually the officers, chosen because they have shown the most interest in the organization and merit the most confidence. Some leaders push themselves to the front because they want recognition, while others are drafted into service because of their special ability or knowledge. Every loyal member should be willing to assume any responsibility that comes to him.

"The second class, the lieutenants, are assistant leaders. They are chairmen of standing and special committees; they have shown particular interest in some line of work or activity of the organization and the ability to obtain the cooperation of other members. They are in the process of becoming leaders.

"The third class, the rank-and-file members, are those who attend meetings regularly and who may be counted on to take part in activities of the organization.

"Finally, every group has a fringe of members who are hangers-on, who come now and then, who have to be urged to attend and to pay their dues, and who are luke-warm in their loyalty".

Any organization, says Professor Sanderson, is strong according to the proportion it has of the first three classes of members, and weak if it has too many of the fourth class.

Elkland Trims Addison High School Nine, 14 to 1, Evening The First Baseball Series

An Addison High School team with many new faces in the line-up went down to defeat to Elkland Saturday by the score of 14 to 1. Orr, Gardner and Joe Domenick were sorely missed at the beginning of the game, and when the local battery, Smith and Root, were removed in the third inning, Addison's chances went glimmering.

Lou Domenick and Heidrick, a freshman battery carried on valiantly, but the Elkland team was too well seasoned an outfit for the inexperienced crew which Coach Hewson had on the field. The young Addison hurler made a good showing at that, as the Tanners were limited to 12 bingles during the game, errors of omission and commission bulked heavily in the result, however. Dorn and Ludlam were the big defensive and offensive guns for Elkland, while Rice and Heidrick did their best to plug the holes in the Addison defensive walls.

Elkland's victory made the inter-school fall series a stand-off with one victory for each school.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of information of the New York State college of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Preserving Silage

C. W. K., writes: "I understand you have a bulletin on preserving silage by adding a certain amount of phosphoric acid. I would like a copy."

J. K. Wilson, professor of soil bacteriology, replies: "We have no bulletin on the subject, but are sending material we have on the production of high protein crops by the use of phosphoric acid.

"This method has so recently been developed at Cornell that no bulletin is available.

"At the present time the country does not have a definite supply of phosphoric acid, but next year enough may be available on the market at a reasonable price."

Trouble With Flock

E. J. C., says he is having trouble with his flock of 200 Rhode Island reds. A short time ago he noticed about 15 standing around listless and dull.

"They do not eat but seem very thirsty. After a few days they become very thin and weak." He says he opened every one that died and could not find anything much that was wrong.

Professor H. E. Botsford of the poultry department replies: "I can not tell from your letter just what the trouble is with the 200 Rhode Island reds that are now three months of age, unless it may be acute coccidiosis.

"I am wondering if you have noticed any blood in the droppings, which is almost a sure indication of this particular disease. I am enclosing some suggestions on feeding and sanitation.

"If this is not the trouble, I suggest that you immediately send two or three of the affected birds alive to Dr. E. L. Brunett of the State Veterinary College at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. He will be glad to open the birds and diagnose the disease of possible."

BRASS TACKS For POULTRY RAISERS

By BURTON P. THARP

MARKETING POULTRY

Many poultry raisers may not be concerned with the marketing of their poultry because they have entered only as a hobby and raise only enough birds to fuss with and use at home. Farmers and others who have taken up poultry raising as a business are deeply concerned with marketing either as a means of disposing of culls and older birds as well as surplus cockerels, or, because they have made meat production a point in the business.

Poultry may be sold alive or dressed either locally or in city markets. A great deal depends on the prices and distance from city markets, as well as on the ability or willingness on the part of the poultry raisers to dress the birds.

In all probability most farmers in New York State prefer to ship the birds they do not wish to keep to the New York City market or to some nearby city. Many of them are able to sell the birds to a local meat market at a good price thus saving the cost of shipping and the shrinkage in weight which amounts to approximately ten per cent.

Most farmers and small flock owners are not prepared to dress poultry for shipment and often dressed poultry prices are not high enough in comparison to live poultry prices to pay for the extra work.

Although many farmers ship poultry or sell to local markets just as the birds are culled from the flock fattening is an item which should be seriously considered. Birds that are plump and in good condition bring a higher price than birds in poor condition especially when sold to a local market. In addition if you have sold good stock to a local meat man once the second sale is easier.

A short period of fattening puts extra weight on the birds and usually pays if the price per pound is reasonable. Corn meal or milk or both may be used. Corn fattened birds have a firmer flesh and stand shipment better than milk fattened ones when sold alive. Fasten cans of soaked grain in the crates and feed the birds well before sending them.

You Pay

Taxes levied on manufacturers are a part of their cost of operation and are included in the price of their products. In the end you pay them. For example, one and two-third cents of the price of a loaf of bread is Federal taxes. It helps to pay the high cost of New Deal government.

Humphrey Radiantfire Heaters, formerly $12.50, now only $9.75. Time payment of course.

Addison Man Highly Successful In Culture of Fine Large Dahlias

In spite of light frosts that hit this section last week and again Tuesday evening, Claude Martin has been successful in protecting his fine field of dahlias. Mr. Martin has burned smudge pots among the dahlias every night when frost threatened to end the beautiful display which greets the eye of every person passing on the Erie or the Rathbone highway.

This dahlia garden is the most surprising venture in outdoor floriculture ever attempted by anyone in this section. Anyone seeing this plot of ground cannot help but be amazed at the surprising number and size of the blooms, the wide variety of colors and the great beauty both of individual plants as well as the entire plot. Mr. Martin has over 600 fully developed plants in this field on West Front Street, most of which are still in fine bloom. He has cut and sold from the garden many dozens of blooms and is now taking orders for roots.

This display is all the more remarkable in view of the fact this section was affected by a serious drouth the first half of the summer. Not having running water available during the first part of the drouth, Mr. Martin carried hundreds of gallons of water to keep his valuable plants alive until he could get a water line laid to the field. He has had single blooms this summer which measured eight and ten inches across, while six inch flowers have been common throughout the garden. Some grow on long stems adapted to cutting, while others are short-stemmed varieties which are only desirable as display plants in the lawn or flower garden.

Many visitors have seen this fine display of dahlias, some of them coming here from widely separated points. Some days more than 100 persons have visited the Martin garden and feasted their eyes upon the gorgeous beauty of these flowers as they wandered up and down the rows. There have been people in the garden from Iowa, Colorado and many other states of the union. While nearby cities of New York and Pennsylvania have been well represented by people who heard of the Martin dahlias and came to see them.

This surprisingly successful start in the culture of these plants indicates that if Mr. Marin continues their growth Addison may become famous as a mecca for dahlia lovers.

Newman, was appointed by Commander Chart to confer with Principal Gladstone regarding the Armistice Day program at Addison High School.

It was announced by post officials that fathers, mothers and wives of veterans who have died since the war and who failed to make application for their adjusted compensation certificates, are entitled to make application and receive accruing benefits under terms of the Adjusted Compensation Act.
